BRECKENRIDGE NEWS.

SATURDAY, APRIL 9, 1892.

ADVOCATE the free turnpike system. Talk to your neighbor about it.

To be successful in building up any kind of business, continuous advertising should be employed.

THERE is no excuse for a man being idle in this town. There is plenty of work for everybody.

The latest fad, in the way of an entertainment, is the cake walk. Why not have one in Cloverport?

CLOVERPORT makes the best vitrified brick in the country. A fact that is not controverted by anybody.

HERE in Cloverport the people talk brick and business. Out at Hardinsburg they talk politics and religion.

IF Breckenridge had as many miles of free turnpikes as she has of railroad she would in a few years be one of the most prosperous counties in the state.

TREAT the strangers that come to this town with courtesy—and especially the traveling men. Even if you don't buy from them treat them kindly when they call.

IN the Municipal election at Hartford, Conn., William Wadsworth Hyde, Democrat, was elected Mayor, by 779 majority, over Henry C. Dwight, Republican, who was a candidate for re-election.

THE NEWS is for Gen. G. L. Adair, of Hawesville, for World's Fair Commissioner. This section of the State is entitled to a representative, and no better man can be named for the place than Gen. Adair.

THE Legislature will probably adjourn about May 15th for a summer recess until about September 1st. It will then reconvene, and, as it is possible, it is not at all improbable that it will remain in session until May comes again.

THE Cloverport Vitrified Brick Company has made contracts for so large a number of its brick that they did not put in a bid for the Louisville contract, fearing that they would be unable to fill the order.—Louisville Times.

THE Louisville ball club is doing some splendid practice playing—cleaning up every thing that comes along—but that spells nothing: "Twas ever thus," and just as soon as the championship season opens she will, as usual, begin to drop behind.

THE New Constitution is reducing taxes very rapidly—Th-r-r-ab, dah, dum! —The State Board of Equalization have just completed their labors, and the rates for almost every county have been increased from 5 to 20 per cent.—Th-r-r-ab, dah, dah!

A YOUNG married woman in this town requires her husband—and he does it like a little man, to read a chapter in the Bible and say his prayers every night before retiring. And yet some people say there is very little religion in this town.

IT surely pays to start stock yards in Louisville. The Bourbon Stock-Yards Company, that greatest of Kentucky's monopolies, have bought off the Union Stock-Yards Company by giving them $250,000 in Bourbon stock, which will soon be at par.

PAT Bannon, the well-known brick man of Louisville, swears that he intends to enjoin the city from laying the John Porter brick on Twenty-second street, where he owns property, and will have to pay his proportional part of the cost. He says that the Porter brick now being laid on this street will absorb at least four or five per cent. of their weight in water, and do not come up to the sample they furnished, on which the estimates were made. The standard established by the city says the absorption must not exceed two per cent.

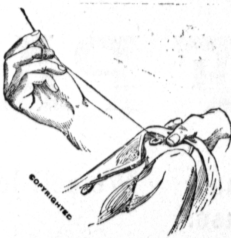

FREE turnpike Roads for Breckenridge county is what we want and must have if we would keep up with other progressive counties in the state. We can get them at a small cost if we make up our minds to do so. Our columns are open for a full and free discussion of this important matter. Let us hear from the farmers.

THE World's Fair Bill passed the House without any reduction, and Kentucky's appropriation will be $100,000. The ancients, however, got in their work by tacking on an amendment that forbids the opening of Kentucky's display on Sunday, and the sale of liquor on its grounds. This was probably supported by men of the McInerney type, that the resident and visiting Kentuckians might have at least one day off from the big show to spend in Chicago saloons, gambling halls and gilded palaces of sin.

THE slanderous publications of C. C. Moore, his arrest and prosecution, together with the sympathy and financial support given him by his fanatical friends, is giving his pet cause a black eye in the opinions of all reasonable and fair-minded people. The Paris Kentuckian, in speaking of his case, very truly says: "The arrest and prosecution of Moore is not on account of his prohibition views. Most of the men who are against him here are temperance men. It is a fight against the publication of slanderous articles on christian people, and when the temperance fanatics attempt to set their cause up against christianity, morality and common decency, they will lose the respect and confidence of all good people."

RUONE Island, the very hub of the wheel of petted and protected manufactories, gave an immense Republican majority of something over 200, and the Republican press is heralding the result to the fourwinds as a great and glorious victory. Knowing Republicans hardly feel good over it, though; while they feel relieved, that the struggle is over for the time being in this state, they recognize the fact that the breathing spell will be short, and that the same battle will have to be fought over again within a few months, with larger game in sight, when their forces will necessarily have to be more scattered. When they think of the immense amount of wealth, oratory, persuading and bull dozing it took to bring them through this time, and that, too, only by the skin of the teeth, they know they have no cinch on the state for November.

Democrats feel much encouraged by the result. It leads us to know that Little Rhody, instead of being a safe Republican state as she has always been heretofore, is not only a Democratic possibility but a probability in the future.

HAND MADE.

Machinery has conferred many boons upon humanity, but it is responsible for a good deal of "cheap and nasty" clothing. The bachelor who does not want to keep sewing on buttons continually prefers hand made clothing.

Smart & Co.'s garments are hand made throughout, and always retain their shape and wear well.

two small children—one a boy and another a girl—were permitted to accompany their mother on a shopping trip in the week before Christmas. They had the fight of their lives for possession of the large retail marts in Sixth Ave. Breaking away from parental hands, they ran joyfully up to the store, exclaiming, "Oh, Mr. Santa Claus! 'Mr. Santa Claus' with such a name! I'm sure that every seven persons was attracted to them. In a hall of the sincerity and enthusiasm that true faith imparts those little stood before the grizzled and toy image and told what they wanted or asked Santa Claus to bring them for Christmas. The little boy wanted a set with korses that could trot, and girl wanted a dolly that could open shut its eyes and talk. So firm was their belief in the actual presence of Santa Claus that they were sure that they could see a twinkle in his and a smile of assent to their petitions from his lips. It was an incident touched the adult observers, one of them, a white haired old gentleman, put a pat on the little girl's head and said, "Santa Claus should ever be on earth."—New York Times.

at the adjournment of the United States court at Danville, Va., recently, was a little scene which was not on pocket. A one armed old Confederate been found guilty of illegal distillation and sentenced to one month's imprisonment and a fine of $100. Judge Paul, who was also an old Confederate, ordered the marshal to bring Frank Morrison, the one armed veteran, to the courtroom. Presently the man and prisoner stood face to face. The one armed man, who had been touched the empty sleeve tears into the eyes of the judge, who said: "I think I can understand your case. Consider your case. We old boys are getting scarce, and you cannot go to Cor. Richmond Times.

Does the Nineteenth Century End?
have been pretty thoroughly con- sidered for years that not one person in a hundred would have been in a position to know when this century will close, and I was much surprised to find the contrary. But that but about eight years of the century remain. This would make the last year of this decade and century. The matter is important enough to be sure, and is very easily made clear. The first century closed with the last day of the year 100; the second with the last day of the year 200; and the nineteenth century will end with the last day of the year 1900, which is nine years from the first day of the year 1892.—J. Ogden Kern in York Sun.

A Steam Sleigh.
Truckee (Cal.) man has in the course of construction a steam sleigh which he claims, when perfected, to travel over snow covered fields and mountains with a speed scarcely less than that of a railroad train. It is his intention to use the contrivance for the hauling of all classes of freight, sawlogs and other material that requires cheap transportation.—Exchange.

Between the black lines embracing each administration, you find the name of the President and his Cabinet and the Chief Justice and Associate Justices, Vice President and Speaker of the House, with the term of office of each. Below these appear the Political Parties, the one in power being above the other. The issues of each party are recorded on the stream representing it with the date. Below the Parties you find the Popular and Electoral Vote of each candidate and the political complexion of each Congress.

Rand, McNally & Co.'s latest U. S. Map, corrected to date, which is the largest ever made, being 46 x 66 inches in size, is printed on the back of this Map for reference, and can be referred to without taking down the map.

This engraving gives but a faint idea of the information shown on the map. The map is printed in eleven colors. It clearly illustrates the history of our government by Administrations, Political Parties and Congresses. Pictures of all the Presidents and their autographs, together with maps and diagrams which have never before been published in a form to be displayed on the wall. Each map and diagram on this slide is printed in a variety of colors, making it very beautiful and attractive. It is impossible to fully describe such a novel and wonderful work as this, so we can only do our best to impress upon you its great value and interest, and assure you that if for any reason whatever you are not satisfied with it when you have received it, the amount you have paid will be refunded.

ANOTHER ORNAMENT.

Vests Will Erect an Immense Business House on the Old Corner Lot.

The enterprising Vests, so as to not be behind other enterprising persons, and to give room for their immense and increasing stock, have come to the conclusion that they owe it to themselves and to their patrons to build a new business house. This will be one of the finest edifices in the city, and will not only reflect much credit upon its dashing projectors, but will be an ornament to the city of which every citizen cannot help but feel proud. The building will be 50x80 feet, will have three stories above ground, with basement below. plate-glass and iron front, and will be fitted up with all the latest improvements and conveniences; will have elevators for passengers and freight, toilet-rooms for the accommodation of the ladies, and will be lighted from basement to garret with electric lights. Work will begin on this new structure May 1st, and will be pushed rapidly to completion. It will be built on the corner of Wall and Poplar streets, where their old building now stands, and they will occupy Beavin's house with their store while it is being built.

WHERE IS THE WELL?

The Body of a Child Said to Have Been Thrown Into One Near Cloverport.

A Horrible Tale of Worse Than Beastly Cruelty Told by a Suffering Woman.

[From the Evansville Journal.]

A terrible story of the brutal treatment of a man toward his family developed last night. A young woman about 28 years of age, who gave her name as Mrs. Nicholas Roessler, arrived here from Henderson, Ky., on the Ohio Valley train at 10:30 o'clock last night. She was on her way to relations in Patoka, Ind. The poor woman was suffering with consumption, and told a horrible story of the last few years of her life. She stated that her maiden name was Letitia Hanks, and that she was raised nine miles back of Dayton, Ky.

During a visit to Cincinnati she met Roessler there, and after a courtship of several months in 1881, she went to Nicholasville, Ky., and notified Roessler, who followed her to that place, where they were married in opposition to the wishes of her father.

For several years everything went well with the young couple. Five years ago Roessler commenced drinking, then gambling, and finally neglected his family. Six months ago he bought a family boat, and with their two children, a boy aged 8 years and a girl 5 years old, started down the river.

While lying at a farm landing below Leavenworth, Ind., the boy died of typhoid fever, and despite the pleadings of the mother, the brutal father buried the body of his child under the bank of the river, not even placing it in a box.

The girl died of diphtheria, and he threw her body in an unused well about five miles below Cloverport, Ky.

She says they then drifted on down the river, stopping for a few days at a time, until one night three weeks ago, while lying at the bank below Henderson, the boat sank. Roessler, after assisting his wife ashore, told her to go where she pleased; that he was going South. When daylight came, a farmer named Mason took care of her and yesterday furnished her with transportation to Patoka, Ind. Her father removed to Missouri, where he died a year ago, leaving an estate valued at from twenty to twenty-five thousand dollars, but did not leave his daughter anything.

It's Worth Trying, at Least.

It is understood the Plattdeutschen-vogelschuetzengesellschaft have made arrangements to take out policies in Die-deutsche-gesellschaft vereinigte feuer-lebens-marine-ungluecks-versicherungs-gesellschaft before making another trip over the lines of the Electricisenstrassen-eisenbahn-wagengesellschaft. Premium payments per week, and policy good until death, when the attorney of the company will sue the heirs of the policy holder for damages.—Kenton Herald.

The Situation.

Out on the Texas Cotton-Belt road, there is a one-legged child of misfortune whose condition as poetized by himself aptly portrays the situation that threatens Democracy. Boiled down to hand-bill poetry-size, his tale of woe reads:

"My object in offering you this song is to get an artificial leg.

"While stopping o'er the threshers, the carrier to clean,

I, to my great misfortune, slipped into the machine."

Let Democracy keep its seat on the tariff-thresher, and it will steer clear of the New York machine and never go stumping around on an artificial silver leg. For running a winning race, nothing can approach its own stout pair of tariff-reform limbs.—Glasgow Times.

Everett Wilson, a twenty-two-year-old son of Dr. J. J. Wilson, of Morehead, committed suicide at that place by shooting himself through the breast with a forty-five calibre pistol. A young lady that he had been keeping company with gave birth to a child, a few days ago, which she said he was the father of, whereupon he went on a spree, and wound up as stated above.

EASTLAND

Do you want to make money? Do you want a cheap house so, now is your time. Buy a lot in Eastland, a suburb of bog Cloverport, just outside of the city limits and adjoining the Vit Brick Plants. A good gravel street leads to this beautiful sub Eastland contains ten acres, and has been laid off with lots, streets and alleys. The lots are for sale and are being offered at very low figures. Many lots have been sold, and buildings are going up in this beautiful suburb already.

Cloverport is on the boom, and with so many brick plants, machine shops, the natural gas, and other different enterprises established here already, besides the prospect for an immense distillery, a large manufactory, working 400 to 500 employes, to be started making numerous articles out of the fine clay abounding here. Cloverport's population will necessarily increase very rapidly, and her estate will be much more valuable in the near future. The lots in Eastland are being bought by good people, and if you want a home with pleasant surroundings, now is your opportunity, before the city is all sold, and before values increase, which is sure to be the case. Lots can be secured on easy payments. Secure a lot and then go to a Building and Loan Association, and build you a home. For further information call on
